Fall 2017

Quiz Bowl is an academic competition in math, science, history, literature, and culture. Students practice weekly and compete in tournaments throughout the year. One of the highlights is participating in WKAR's televised "QuizBusters" show, which is hosted by Okemos Public School's very own Matt Ottinger. This will be a special season for the Quiz Bowl students, as "QuizBusters" will film its 29th and final season this fall.

QUIZ BOWL

OHS Quiz Bowl's 2016-17 varsity team

Quiz Bowl has existed at Okemos High School for several decades and is currently coached by OHS German teacher Andrew Floyd. Students participate in practices each Friday during the school year-and many students are so passionate about their team that they organize informal practices during the summers too.

The 2016-17 season was an especially successful one, with the team placing 25th (out of 304 teams) at the National Academic Quiz Tournament championship meet in Atlanta. As Mr. Floyd put it, “This could very well be the most successful year in OHS Quiz Bowl history! I can not adequately express how proud I am both of their results and of the exemplary manner in which they always represented our school and community.”

For several years, a number of Quiz Bowl students earned $5,000 scholarships to Michigan State University based on their participation in “QuizBusters.”

Mr. Floyd thanks the OEF for its continued support of Quiz Bowl. “None of this could happen without the OEF’s ongoing support of the program through its funding of the advisor stipend, as well as a mini-grant that offsets a significant portion of the national championship registration fee. Every Friday, 20+ OHS students gather in my classroom and an adjacent one to practice, improve and have a lot of fun. Especially for my varsity players, their determination to better their quiz bowl knowledge extends well beyond that practice into hours of weekly individual study. They are truly passionate about and dedicated to quiz bowl. As I’ve said before, for many of them it is THE extracurricular activity they most enjoy and look forward to every week.”

Thank you to the OEF donors who make this experience possible for our high school students!

PRESERVE THE CORE, STIMULATE PROGRESS

Superintendent's Message by Alena Zachery-Ross

It is my honor to correspond with you as the new Superintendent for the Okemos Public Schools. As I began my journey to Okemos from Muskegon on July 1st, I was impressed by this wonderful community which embraces its diverse neighbors as fervently as it embraces its public schools. My husband and I are looking forward to becoming more familiar with the rich educational history of excellence here, along with the extraordinary people who are members of this community.

As with any change in leadership, constituents often wonder about the new leadership and their vision moving forward. My background is strongly rooted in education. I grew up in Detroit, a daughter of a public school teacher. After attending Grand Valley State University, where I focused on psychology and special education, I returned to Detroit to begin my teaching career. While in Detroit, I taught at William Davison Elementary School, a Blue Ribbon School in the Detroit Public School District. I became a school psychologist for the high school team prior to leaving to serve most of my career in the Van Dyke Public School District. At Van Dyke, I served as teacher consultant, elementary principal, middle school principal, and finally as assistant superintendent of curriculum and instruction. Most recently I was the Superintendent of Schools for the Muskegon Heights Public School Academy System, where I served for the past five years.

In my years in education, my vision has been the same: for all students to perform at or above grade level and graduate with the skills to be productive citizens in the world. This vision aligns with Okemos' vision statement: "Every student is encouraged, challenged and given the opportunity to reach his or her full academic, artistic, athletic, civic and social potential. Through this vision, Okemos Public Schools will strive to set a higher standard for schools throughout the state and nation."

I recognize that Okemos Public Schools has always been a high performing district with high quality people, who have high expectations for all, and I also recognize that in this ever-changing world, we must continue to raise the bar to continue excellence. Therefore, I hope that we will all embrace the work of Jim Collins from his book, Built to Last. He states that "the drive for progress is never satisfied when the status quo is working well. ... We can always do better; we can always go further; we can always find new possibilities." As Henry Ford said, "You have got to keep doing and going." We must preserve the core of the excellent foundation that has been established in Okemos over the years, while also stimulating progress. This important work is not work that I or even our extremely talented faculty can do alone. We MUST do this together. We must all embrace the district's mission of "Together ... educating with excellence, inspiring learners for life!" It is my fundamental belief that during these times of change and social unrest, it is most important to hold firm to our core values and beliefs more than ever.

I look forward to working with each of you to ensure a successful 2017-18 school year by continuing to preserve the core while stimulating progress!

Author Denise Brennan-Nelson visits Okemos Schools

Each spring, the OEF and Horizon Bank team up to bring an author to our elementary schools. This author spends one day in each of our four buildings, giving presentations to our students. In 2017, the OEF was proud to bring Michigan author Denise Brennan-Nelson to our schools. Brennan-Nelson, who has authored 20 picture books, including Buzzy the Bumblebee, Willow, Leopold the Lion, and Someday, spoke to students about using their imaginations to spark ideas, which are the start of any story. “Keep your imaginations turned on,” Brennan-Nelson told students, “and don’t ever stop wondering.” Brennan-Nelson encouraged students to keep a journal. “Ideas come at us all the time. Be ready for them.” The author showed students a stack of her own journals, one started at age 10, another begun in 1932 by her grandmother. “She wasn’t an author,” Brennan-Nelson told students, “but her journal is the best story I’ve ever read.” Brennan-Nelson made the point that writing isn’t just for authors: “Everyone is a writer because no one else can tell your story.”

The OEF is grateful for the continued support of Horizon Bank in making this annual event possible. Learn more at www.oefsite.org/author.

GRANT HIGHLIGHTS

Okemos Students Get Hands-On, Active Learning Opportunity

Ever wonder what an owl eats? The 3rd and 4th grade students at Okemos Public Montessori at Central can tell you. They dissected owl pellets as part of a science unit on animal structure last year.

Owls consume their prey whole, then regurgitate a mass of indigestible parts. These hard, dry pellets can be pulled apart to reveal the contents of the owl's meal. Using toothpicks, OPM students gently separated the different parts of the pellets, which were purchased from a scientific supply company. The students used photo guides to identify the types of bones. Bone identification led to the discovery of what type of animal the owl had eaten (bird, rodent, etc.).

In some cases, the pellet contained enough bones to allow students to assemble the bones in the proper structure on paper, building a skeleton of the prey.

Students wrote a newsletter article about their learning, prepared visual presentations for a school-wide display, and gave a verbal presentation for an OEF board member.

This activity taught students grade-appropriate science lessons about animal diet, bone structure, and how both predator and prey fit into an ecosystem. But it also taught them about the excitement of scientific discovery, how to analyze findings and compare them to a chart, broadened their vocabulary, honed their written and verbal presentation skills, and, most importantly, made learning fun.

Students beamed with pride as they showed off their bone diagrams and explained what they learned. “It was so fun!” “I loved it!” Not all students were so enthusiastic at first. One student was disgusted by the idea of the project and hung back as his classmates started pulling apart their group’s pellet. But, after he saw the tiny bones, he was intrigued and participated in the rest of the activity. And that may be the most valuable lesson of all.

The Okemos Education Foundation provided funding for the owl pellet project through the OEF Micro Grant program.

Jazz Artist-in-Residence

In 2016, OHS Director of Bands Mark Stice received an OHS grant to have jazz artists Julian Valesco and Max Colley, Jr. work with OHS’ two jazz ensembles. The artists visited weekly to work with students on listening and improvisational skills and were featured during jazz performances in the spring.

The visiting artists had a positive influence on the bands’ performance, as indicated by feedback received during the Michigan State Board and Orchestra Association District 8 Jazz Festival. Students also reported that the experience increased their performance confidence and helped them gain a deeper appreciation for jazz. One student said the artists demonstrated how to use “the existing library of recordings of jazz music as inspiration for improvisational solos.” Another student was reminded of the “importance of listening to jazz in order to learn.” After working with Max Colley, one student observed, “I have come to understand that jazz is more of a language, and a performance is just a conversation between members of the ensemble.”

KidBlog

In the fall of 2016, Kinawa received an OEF grant to purchase an online subscription to KidBlog for every 5th grade Language Arts classroom. This child-focused blogging program gives Kinawa teachers a new and fun way to help Okemos students hone their writing skills. As teacher Joan Ferguson explains, blogging “has allowed our students to share experiences and ideas with an audience instead of just their teacher. Students are more motivated to write well because they know their classmates will be reading and commenting on their work.”

Blogging has been integrated into the curriculum in many different ways, including journal writing, writing about current events or assigned reading passages, practicing correct writing formats, learning to give appropriate feedback and have meaningful discussions through commenting, self-reflection, cultural diversity projects, book reviews and more. The blogging site also allows students to add visual interest to their writing (background images, color, varying fonts, etc.), making the experience more fun and creative for young students.

Fifth-grader Liam said, “KidBlog has helped me become a better writer. I like that I can comment on people’s writing so that I can take observations and make my writing better.” Melody said, “I like KidBlog because it gives me confidence.” And Norah observes that she enjoyed using KidBlog because “when you see other people’s writing, you want to do a better job yourself.”

The Okemos Education Foundation is grateful to be able to fund creative and interactive educational tools, supplies, and programs. Thank you, Okemos teachers, for bringing these valuable experiences to our students. And thank you, OEF donors, for making the grants possible through your generous contributions.

ALUMNI NEWS BY ROD ELLIS

The Okemos Alumni Association received news about several reunions this past summer. The classes of 1977, 1972, 1967, 1962, and 1957 each held events that rekindled friendships, shared news, and reminded all of fun times in Okemos Public Schools.

The Okemos Alumni Association was re-organized this past spring and is now a nonprofit corporation that provides a variety of services and facilitates financial support to Okemos Public Schools through the Okemos Education Foundation. “We, who have benefited so much from our school experience, pledge to help maintain that experience for future generations,” says Rod Ellis, Class of 1965 and Okemos Alumni Association president. The Alumni Association maintains a free website for alumni, teachers, and staff to help plan reunions, announce news and events, and record the history of Okemos alumni.

Log onto www.OkemosAlumni.org and take a look at all it has to offer. There are several projects in the works to create biographies of noted graduates for the Alumni Hall of Fame to honor Okemos alumni who have made significant contributions. Through the Okemos Alumni Association, you can enjoy the history, contribute to the history, and donate to the school. If you are an Okemos alum, please reach out. We’d like to hear from you and we welcome you to share your memories with others.

The Importance of School Science Fairs By Okemos parent Marcela Westrate

I would like to thank the Okemos Education Foundation for supporting Science Fairs at Okemos schools. Both of my girls really enjoy science and have participated in fairs at both Bennett Woods Elementary and Kinawa Middle Schools. I appreciate the opportunity that the fairs give them to explore science first-hand through the process of conducting independent projects that are displayed at the annual fair.

OEF Grants: Science Fair Support

I've found that science fair projects expose my girls to many important skills. They learn to conduct research at both the library and through various science websites, and they develop organizational skills by thinking through the steps of the project and creating the necessary supply lists. Designing the project display board allows the girls to combine their love of art with effective writing skills. Finally, they learn about the steps of the scientific method and about how it's okay to be wrong, since sometimes the projects do not have the results that the girls expect.

When the fair finally arrives, the girls have the opportunity to present their projects, teaching them confidence and important public speaking skills. Science Fairs offer a way for students to combine nearly every subject and come away with the pride of completing a project that is important to them.

I'm so appreciative of the opportunities that the Okemos Public Schools provide, and I'm glad that the district and the OEF recognize the importance of science.

The OEF offers $350 annually to each school in support of their annual science fair. This funding, coupled with funding provided by each school's parent group, covers expenses for event materials and outside exhibitors' fees. Thank you, OEF donors, for making these science fair grants possible. Learn more and see additional photos at www.oefsite.org/science-fairs

4th Grade Safety Patrol

Each Okemos elementary school has a safety patrol program. Fourth grade students serve as “safeties,” helping students safely cross the road, assisting with bus loading and unloading, and enforcing hallway safety rules. Bennett Woods 4th-grade safety patrol student Iris Nieland shares her thoughts:

Freshman Connect

Each 9th-grade student is invited to attend a half-day orientation program at OHS before the school year begins. Students are divided into small groups, led by two upperclass student mentors. These Connect leaders facilitate the orientation program and then check in with their assigned students throughout their first year at OHS. Here are some thoughts from students involved in the program:

“As a new student, Freshman Connect allowed me to make friends before the school year started. I felt better seeing a familiar face on the first day.”

“I found out that one of my freshman students was struggling with chemistry, so I offered to give her a hand with her homework and with studying for her test. So we met up in the library during lunch, and I gave her a hand with her work. It has been a pleasure to be her Connect leader this year.”

“I texted one of my 9th graders to see how they were doing and we got to talking about school and life. We ended up having a long conversation about some of the problems they were facing and how I was dealing with a lot of the same stuff. It made me realize how Connect can help Freshmen but is also a great experience for the upperclass leaders.”

“I was excited to apply to be a safety at the end of third grade. I knew that it was a lot of responsibility but that it was also fun. I was so excited when I found out that I was going to share a morning post with one of my best friends.”

“One of my favorite things about being a safety is seeing all the adorable kindergartners. I get lots of hugs from kindergartners who get off the bus in the morning, and it really gets my day off to a good start! I like helping them out.”

“I’m really glad that the OEF gives schools money to help pay for the safety patrol program. Thank you OEF!”
